

Most nurses and nursing staff work in the community.

Community nursing helps people with a huge variety of needs live in dignity and independently.

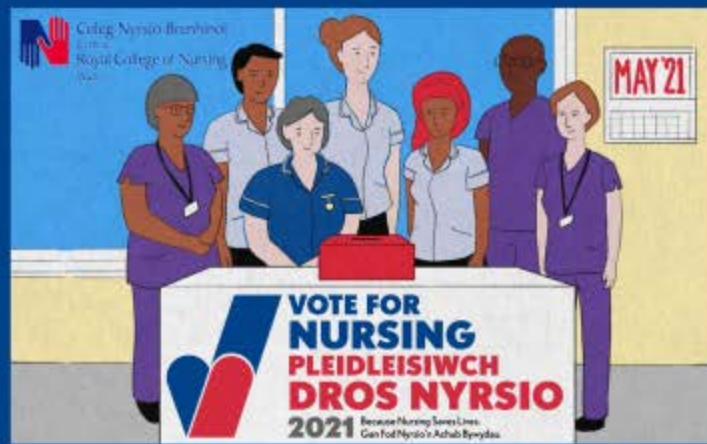

It's not just nicer for people to be at home. People are often better off there, more active, and safer from infection.

But without enough community nursing staff, people can find themselves back in hospital, or admitted to residential care.

Wales urgently needs more community nursing staff, particularly District Nurses with a Specialist Practitioner Qualification.

In the Senedd elections in May 2021, all political parties must commit to investing in community nursing staff, present and future. Vote for nursing, because nursing saves lives.
